

Artist Profile

After an early apprenticeship as a studio potter producing wheel thrown domestic stoneware, I graduated from Central School of Art, London with a BA Honours Degree in Ceramics/3D Design and a Diploma in Ceramics.

I opened my own workshop studio where I made bespoke tiles and panels for architects and private commissions, specialising at the time in Victorian Tubeline designs.

I have lectured in Ceramics at FE and A'level for 13 years part time for a variety of Art Colleges around the country including Rochdale, Cumbria and Maidstone and have worked as a visiting lecturer delivering tile workshops at the Boston Institute in Boston Massachusetts, USA.

I have 20 years experience in the product development/design of ceramic prototypes for both home and corporate installations with both small and large manufacturers/distributors in the UK and USA , including B & Q ,the V & A, Fired Earth and Menards (USA).

I am also proficient in glass fusing and resin casting.

Recent opportunities provided the catalyst for expansion into delivering workshops for schools and communities.
